

June 2008

The great thing about woodturning is you never run out of things to make. Also, the process of creating something is as satisfying as the feeling of accomplishment when you finish a piece. Usually before an item is finished we are thinking about what we are going to do next. And now with our order from Craft Supply, we have more new projects to try.

Remember when trying something new make several items before you move on to something else. For me it seems like the first one requires a lot of thinking and maybe some trial and error. The second one goes much better and the fourth one is what you had envisioned when you started. Of course every wood is different and you make adjustments as you go.

Larry Nelson did an outstanding job of coordinating the Craft Supply order. He has told me how accommodating they were at correcting mistakes and getting the back ordered items. We are very fortunate they do this. If you ever have to call for customer support or when you make an order tell them you appreciate this service.

People are recognizing and appreciating the value of hand-made items. Most everything we use in our lives is mass-produced. The percentage of people with the skill to create objects for use or art is getting smaller. These objects we create only become more valuable with time. Keep creating and encourage young people to recognize and appreciate the quality of anything handmade.

Duey